

So, my friend said I needed to add my bio...

I was talking to my mom once and she told me she was worried when I was a teen; all I did was stay in my room alone and make stuff. I learned to spin, bought a loom and played around with pattern weaving, did batik and natural dyes in the kitchen.

I told her I was just trying to be an artist—isn't that what we do, sit around in a room and make stuff, except when we're older we get to call our room a studio...?

So, I went off to art school and got a degree in textile studio arts.

Then I had to go out and learn a 'real' skill so I could 'make a living', but as you can see, I still mostly like to be in my room and make stuff...

Annabelle Stein

